contains the text of the vulgate Clementina, that is the Latin version of the sacred scriptures originally made by San Girolamo, according to the revision and standardization of Pope Sixtus V and printed in 1598 under Pope Clement VIII. This text contains punctuation signs, such as periods, quotes, points nu nu onos non ehc - aiv –Àsoc e isetnerap Both original texts of the Scriptures and the translation of San Girolamo. They are also part of the Clementina review. However, for most readers, understanding is very easier with them, as we have in every biblical version in modern languages. This revision is to date - for Roman Catholics - the officially recognized version of the Latin rite and contains the only authorized text of the vulgate. Therefore, this version includes the so-called "Gallicano Psalter", that is, the second version of Saint Jerome of the Book of Psalms made directly by the Greek setting. Although the general principle followed by San Girolamo - as regards the ancient testament - was the primacy of the Jewish text, its Jewish version of the Greek or Jewish jump on the Old Testament, since there are fervent supporters of both hypotheses. However, we give here for reference some historical backgrounds on the three Latin versions of Jerome of the jerome jerome was responsible for three versions of the Psalms. Him's first review was made on the old Latin version in use at that moment, very deficient: the "Voto Itala". He compared him with the Greek of the seventy and issued his corrections, which have been accepted and passed in use, especially in Italy, becoming known as the "Roman version". After a short period, however, San Girolamo discovered that the corrections he had made were not adequate and made a second review with further corrections from the Greek, which he induced was taken up in France, and was the most version in use in Gaul, etc. . And became known as the "Gallicana". Gradually this review replaced the "Roman version", which, however, has remained in use in Rome for a considerable time, and nowadays it is still used in the divine sung by San Pietro. The "Roman version" was the one that Sant'Agostino of Canterbury, who came as he did from Rome, brought with himself to England, and apparently the common version remained in that country until the Norman conquest. The two versions so made by St. Jerome for the corrections of the old Latin in view of the Greek naturally contains a lot that is the same. The third version made by San Girolamo in a subsequent period of his life was translated directly by the Hebrew. Although San Girolamo considered that this version really represented the true sense of the psalmist, it was never accepted by the Roman-Catholic Church for practical use. It is found in some bibles, in particular of Spanish origin, either as an addition to the usual "Gallicana version", or instead of it. It seems that it is mainly due to the wide liturgical use of the Salter well- in the meters it would be difficult to receive everywhere. The regulation of the electronic form for the word was compiled by the modules for Vulsearch 4.2 (site: ; E - mail: Little.mouth@soon.com) a software focused on the Latin vulgate with many interesting characteristics, such as an additional Latin dictionary component adapted by the words of William Whitaker and also a routine of accentuation by Bertrand Michelet - can view the Latin text with accents. Their original tags for the scheduled breaks or paragraphs were maintained à € à £ à ¢ à ¢ more possible, with the exception of the return tags, which were beyond our ability to convert correctly. We have added the red and bold formatting on our own on the titles of the psalm, also on the Jewish alphabetical heads of some verses. The text of Clementina Vulgata - used by Vulsearch - has been modified by Clementine's text project, with the following Bozovic, Marjorie Burghart, Ron Conte, Michael Dubiaga, Seàinder Finnegan, senseless Aldundis, Edward Kotski, Bertrand Michelet, Michael Morbach, Richard Urquhart, Andreja Vasiljevic and Edgard Vreuls. The electronic version of Vulsearch was created by Little.mouth@soon.com, based on Colunga-turdo 1947 and Vercellone 1861 (complete information on the text of <http://vulsearch.sf.net/gettext.html>)
